DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 3, 4, 7-13 and 21-23 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over admitted prior art in view of Neely and Morinville.

The admitted prior art shows all of the limitations of the claims except for specifying a response disputing one or more line items and the specifics of the approvers from the purchasing entity.

From applicant's "background" section, conventional B2B EIPP systems allow businesses to have invoices presented, processed and paid through an intermediate service. In doing so, the intermediate service generally downloads an entire invoice from a provider of goods and/or services and enables the invoice to be managed on-line by both the provider and a purchaser. Although such services enable businesses to perform invoice processes electronically, dispute and payment processing is limited to the entire invoice.

Neely teaches an electronic invoicing and payment system where (column 5, top) the customer may pay less (a response reflecting one line item) than the amount due on the invoice for either unspecified reasons or for a specific reason such a dispute concerning a line item contained on the invoice in order to communicate with the biller and to not pay for items not received.

Based on the teaching of Neely, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to modify the conventional EIPP system to pay less than an invoice amount as a response to a disputed line item in order to communicate with the biller and to not pay for items not received.

Morinville teaches a signature loop authorizing method. The system assigns approval roles for certain functions. Paragraph 0069 specifically discusses the possibility "if two management levels are necessary for approval". This allows greater oversight for higher profile decisions.

Based on the teaching of Morinville, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to modify the conventional EIPP system to incorporate authorization procedures for different actions including a second approval on some line items in order to allow greater oversight for higher profile decisions.
